Salt Lake City
May 6, 2006
Encouraged by both of their U.S. Senators – Orrin Hatch and Robert Bennett – to tackle the health care problems facing the nation, participants at the Salt Lake City community meeting balanced the concepts of fairness and individual responsibility in their effort to address the complexity and inefficiency in the current health care system.

They recognized that everyone should have access to basic health care, and expressed their frustration that getting care often requires “luck, a relationship, money and perseverance.” However, participants acknowledged that they would have to make a contribution as well. A number pointed to several potential solutions that would engage and empower the consumer in order to slow the growth of health care costs. At the same time, participants called for more transparency in pricing to improve understanding and control on behalf of the consumer.

Those in the meeting felt that addressing efficiency and access would have a positive overall impact on decreasing costs. When ranking proposals for how to reduce costs, participants at the Salt Lake City meeting listed “requiring that all Americans enroll in basic health care coverage, either private or public” as their top choice. In support of the concept, one participant remarked that “in our conservative area, it goes against the grain to require people to do things. But we require auto insurance and people are OK with that.”
SESSION FINDINGS

Values

Every citizen has a basic right to have basic health care and it can’t be based on the type of job they have.

Over 90 percent of the participants at the meeting felt that the health care system in the U.S. has major problems or is in a state of crisis. The majority of individuals (72 percent) responded that the most important reason to have health insurance is to protect against high medical expenses, rather than to pay for everyday medical costs.

When participants began discussing what values should be fundamental to a health care system, the concepts of equality and fairness emerged strongly. Over half of the individuals expressed a desire to have “appropriate, affordable, accessible health care for everyone” and “equal access to care and equal treatment.” A quarter of the participants valued “basic health care as a human right,” prioritizing “universal coverage up front for everyday services that is affordable.” Other values included access to early intervention and prevention as well as transparency in pricing and financing. The majority of the participants felt it should be public policy, a stated public goal set out in either federal or state law, that all Americans have affordable health care coverage (77 percent).

Benefits

I don’t have a problem with that basic package of health care services. But I have a problem saying that should be covered at 100% for everyone. That’s something that we, as a society, cannot afford.

The concept of fairness resurfaced in the discussion of benefits, both in terms of access to care and the contributions that individuals make for that care. Over 80 percent of participants preferred a health care system which provided everyone with a defined set of benefits as opposed to a system of categorical coverage. Their frustrations with the current system, which uses categories of people to determine coverage, included the “loopholes,” the decline in the number of employers offering coverage and concerns about the impact of the health care burden on the ability of companies to compete globally. They voiced a desire for everyone to contribute financially to a health care system, recognizing that “individuals need a connection between the services provided and the money I’m paying for those services myself.”

When asked who should be involved in determining what benefits should be included in a basic package, Salt Lake City participants prioritized the involvement of consumers and health care professionals, followed in descending order by state and local government, the federal government, employers and insurance.

As we consider ways to improve our health care system, what values and/or principles do you believe are fundamental?
(Top 5 responses)

- Equal access to care and equal treatment (equal quality, fairness)
- Appropriate, affordable, accessible health care for everyone
- Basic health care as a human right
- Early intervention and prevention
- Transparency in pricing / financing
Getting Health Care

You can't get through this system without luck, a relationship, money and perseverance.

Many of the frustrations and difficulties that people had encountered in getting health care had to do with things they saw as interfering with the “patient-provider” relationship. Barriers included the cost of care, the complexity of the current system, lengthy waiting times and long distances to access specialists. Participants saw the complexity in the current system as an unnecessary barrier, and were frustrated that it takes “luck, a relationship, money and perseverance” just to navigate the current system. They desired simplicity and security in their care, citing the lack of portability as a significant concern. Individuals emphasized that they were being “priced-out” of the current system, saying that costs were going up so much they were opting to drop out of the system entirely.

Financing

I know in our conservative area, it goes against the grain to require people to do things. But we require auto insurance and people are ok with that.

Once again, participants reiterated their desire to make health care fair and accessible for all and recognized that everyone has a level of responsibility for their health care. The majority of individuals thought everyone should be required to enroll in basic health care coverage, either public or private (81 percent). They recognized that society could not afford to provide all health care services to everyone, but felt basic care should be accessible to all Americans. Participants noted that when people do not participate in the system, others bear the burden of their costs. There was clapping and vocal agreement when a participant said everyone should participate because the “invincibles” or those that choose not to participate, “always end up in the ER and we pay for them anyway.” They agreed that if people opt out of enrolling in a system, “they should be held responsible for the costs of their care.” Participants recognized that “in our conservative area, it goes against the grain to require people to do things. But we require auto insurance and people are ok with that.”
When the discussion focused on how to finance health care, around 80 percent of participants thought some people should pay more than others. Over half of the group felt the determination should be based on income, but around a quarter of the group thought that health behaviors should also be taken into consideration. Participants also revealed their preference to purchase insurance directly from an insurance company, or have it provided by the government. Less than 20 percent preferred to receive their health insurance from their employers. When asked if public policy should continue to use tax rules to encourage employer based health insurance, the audience was fairly evenly split on the topic with 53 percent in favor and 47 percent opposed.

Tradeoffs and Options

Are we willing to concede that there are people that will continue to suffer from the capitalistic society and the profits involved?

Participants recognized their ability to be part of a solution and offered suggestions on what they viewed were the responsibilities of individuals and families in the health care system. They saw a responsibility for the consumer to participate at some level in the payment for health care services in order to increase awareness of the cost of the services they are utilizing. They acknowledged that the majority of health care costs in Utah are generated by a small percentage of the population, but still felt that there should be an increase in health education across the board. Education should be focused on healthy behaviors in an effort to increase early intervention and prevent costly problems, in addition to end of life issues. They suggested that people be held financially accountable for unhealthy lifestyle choices. Participants also agreed on the need to communicate health care difficulties to their representatives, saying that members of Congress “all have access to the benefits and services that are difficult for everyone else to get. They don’t stay up at night thinking about how to get care for a sick child or how to pay for their spouse’s care.”

They pointed out that the question of responsibilities “assumes that everyone has the capability to take responsibility and we need to make sure that we remember that there are some people without those capabilities.”

Participants discussed what could be done to slow the growth of health care costs in the current “bloated and inefficient” system. They felt eliminating direct to consumer advertising for pharmaceuticals, increasing price transparency and engaging consumers in the cost of delivering services would have a high level of impact on costs. In terms of feasibility, they listed “education in schools, churches and communities about health care” and the increased involvement of other health care professionals as steps that could be easily implemented.

Participants noted the impact that electronic medical records could have in reducing the inefficiencies and costs in the current system, saying “If we had better records, electronic records, we could have better data as a society that could lead to better decision making.”

The majority of participants (80 percent) were willing to increase their personal financial contribution to a health care system that would result in every American having access to health care coverage and services.

When asked about public spending priorities, participants favored the investment in public health programs to prevent disease, promote healthy lifestyles and protect the public in the event of epidemics or disasters. They valued the preservation of Medicare and Medicaid. They recognized the importance of guaranteeing that all Americans get health care when they need it, through public safety net programs (if they can not afford it otherwise) and also emphasized the need for enough health care providers, particularly in rural and inner city areas. They thought it was important for all Americans to have health insurance.

"Requiring that all Americans enroll in basic health care coverage, either private or public" was listed as the top choice for ways to ensure access to health care. They saw value in expanding neighborhood health clinics. The third highest proposal for the Salt Lake City meeting was to “create a national health insurance program, financed by taxpayers, in which all Americans would get their insurance.” They also thought it would be helpful to increase the flexibility afforded to states in how they use federal funds for state programs to maximize coverage.

METHODOLOGY

The meeting format was a combination of table-level and full audience discussions. Attendees to this meeting participated in table-level discussions (10 participants per table), assisted by the table facilitator, and reported their findings to the entire audience. The attendees also participated in moderated discussions involving the larger group and expressed their opinions to survey questions electronically through keypads. During the full group discussions, key points raised by individuals and tables were compiled and displayed on the screens. Participants then used their key pads to answer questions or rank options and the results were displayed as received. Findings from these instant polls formed the basis for additional full group discussion. Additional information from this meeting is available at www.citizenshealthcare.gov by selecting “Completed Community Meetings” and “Salt Lake City.”
Over one hundred Utahans gathered on Saturday, May 6, 2006, at the Salt Lake City Marriott Downtown, to talk about the status of health care in the United States. Senator Orrin Hatch and Senator Bob Bennett welcomed their constituents to the meeting, thanking them for participating in this effort to find solutions to make health care work for all Americans. Also present was Kent Michie, Utah Insurance Commissioner, and representatives from the Governor’s staff. Senator Hatch, who sponsored the legislation that created The Citizens’ Health Care Working Group, informed participants that next year, as either the Chair of the Finance Committee or Ranking Member, one of his priorities in that leadership position would be to “drive through and get something done” in health care. He recognized this Working Group’s ability to “give us the tools and the understanding that we need to come up with the solutions.” Senator Hatch told the participants, “I’ll push through legislation if you’ll do your part and come up with thoughtful recommendations.”

Dr. Brent James and Richard Frank represented the Working Group at this meeting.

17.7% 6 Basic health care as a human right
8.9% 7 Transparency in pricing/financing
0.0% 8 Make access culturally and linguistically appropriate
0.0% 9 Benevolence towards every member of the community
1.3% 10 Patients should have more control of their choices

Should it be public policy that all Americans have affordable health care coverage? [By public policy we mean that the stated public goal is set out in federal or state law.]
77.2% 1 Yes
22.8% 2 No

Which of the following statements most accurately represents your views?
Providing coverage for particular groups of people (e.g. employees, elderly, low-income, etc.) as is the case now
18.7% 1 Providing a defined level of services for everyone (either by expanding the current system or creating a new system)
81.3% 2

On a scale of 1 (no input) to 10 (exclusive input), how much input should each of the following have in deciding what is in a basic benefit package?

4th 4.649 Federal government
3rd 4.671 State and/or local government
What kinds of difficulties have you had in getting access to health care services? And which of these kinds of difficulties is the most important to address?

1. Inability to navigate the system without luck, a relationship, money and perseverance
2. Cost, Culture, Language, Education
3. Had no difficulty getting access
4. Red tape and accessing special benefits
5. Insufficient reimbursement
6. Assumptions
7. Being medically uninsurable inhibits access to care
8. Insufficient number of physicians
9. Portability of coverage job-to-job (a condition covered at one job becomes a pre-existing condition for the next job)
10. Access for underrepresented/underserved populations

In getting health care, what is most important to you?

1. Efficiency or value (cost divided by result)
2. Quality care
3. Access to timely, appropriate care
4. Choice of quality provider based on good data
5. No interference in doctor-patient relationship (no insurance companies)
6. Understanding how to navigate the system

Should everyone be required to enroll in basic health care coverage - either private or public?

81.0% 1 Yes
19.0% 2 No

Should some people be responsible for paying more than others?

80.0% 1 Yes
20.0% 2 No

What criteria should be used for making some people pay more?

8.5% 1 None - everyone should pay the same
4.2% 2 Family size
22.5% 3 Health behaviors
59.2% 4 Income
5.6% 5 Other

Who would you prefer to provide you with health insurance?

17.6% 1 An employer
27.0% 2 The government
36.5% 3 You purchase it directly from an insurance company
10.8% 4 Other
8.1% 5 Don’t know
Should public policy continue to use tax rules to encourage employer-based health insurance?

52.8% 1 Yes
47.2% 2 No

What responsibilities of individuals and families in the health care system would you support most?

-- 1 Be educated on how to promote healthy lifestyle; informed consumer
Consumer should always have a (reasonable) financial stake in each medical point of contact
-- 2 Pay increases in taxes
-- 3 People should be held financially accountable for unhealthy lifestyle choices
-- 5 Contribute to Health Savings Accounts (HSA's)
Become involved in communicating with government about the severity of the problem
-- 6 Become involved in communicating with government about the severity of the problem
-- 7 Participate in system; make family plans, esp. with end-of-life issues
-- 8 Ration care (e.g. stamp use in WWII)

Which of these steps is the most important to take in order to slow the growth of health care costs in America? Please rate the following on a scale from 1 (low impact) to 10 (high impact)

3rd 6.714 A - Engage the consumer in cost of delivering services; make them directly responsible
7th 6.265 B - More involvement of other health care professionals apart from medical doctors, in particular screening
4th 6.493 C - Single-payer system
9th 5.449 D - Place a cap on catastrophic surgeries
2nd 7.167 E - Increase pricing transparency of procedures
1st 7.522 F - Eliminate direct-to-consumer advertising for pharmaceutical companies
6th 6.400 G - Eliminate inefficiencies in system, in particular medical records
5th 6.457 H - Education in schools, church, communities about health care
8th 6.059 I - Tort reform

Which of these steps is the most important to take in order to slow the growth of health care costs in America? Please rate the following on a scale from 1 (low feasibility) to 10 (high feasibility)

6th 6.119 A - Engage the consumer in cost of delivering services; make them directly responsible
3rd 6.754 B - More involvement of other health care professionals apart from medical doctors, in particular screening

Guaranteeing that all Americans get health care when they need it, through "public safety net" programs (if they can not afford it)."
3rd  7.579

Preserving Medicare & Medicaid
2nd  7.831

If you believe it is important to ensure access to affordable, high quality health care coverage and services for all Americans, which of these proposals would you suggest for doing this? Please rate each of the following proposals on a scale from 1 (low) to 10 (high).

Offer uninsured Americans income tax deductions, credits, or other financial assistance to help them purchase of private health insurance on their own.
6th  5.544

Expand state government programs for low-income people (eg. Medicaid & S-CHIP) to provide coverage for more people without health insurance.
7th  5.342

Rely on free-market competition among doctors, hospitals, other health care providers and insurance companies rather than having government define benefits and set prices.
9th  4.351

Open up enrollment in national federal programs like Medicare or the federal employees' health benefit program
5th  6.013

Expand current tax incentives available to employers & their employees to encourage employers to offer insurance to more workers & families
8th  5.155

Require businesses to offer health insurance to their employees
10th 3.714

Expand neighborhood health clinics
2nd  6.986

Create a national health insurance program, financed by taxpayers, in which all Americans would get their insurance
3rd  6.575

Require that all Americans enroll in basic health care coverage, either private or public 1st  7.118

Increase flexibility afforded states in how they use federal funds for state programs (such as Medicaid and S-CHIP) to maximize coverage
