ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The Commission wishes to thank the following individuals for their dedication, commitment, and professionalism in researching, editing, and writing the Report: Allan I. Mendelowitz, Executive Director, James McDermott, Senior Economist, David Corbin, Peter Videnieks, and Christopher G. Ingram of the Commission staff; Allen Lenz, who prepared the statistical analyses for Appendix V; Rona Mendelsohn, who performed the technical editing; and Eileen Mauskopf with the Federal Reserve Board, for her work in illuminating the linkages between the current account and the domestic economy. In addition, the Commission wishes to thank the writers and technical staff of the Economic Policy Institute, in particular, Rob Scott and James Burke, for their contributions to the writing of the Report, and to Wynne Godley of the Levy Institute for his contributions to the writing of the Report.

The Commission would also like to extend its deep appreciation to those who testified as expert witnesses, the technical experts who contributed research papers to inform the public debate on the issues, and others who assisted in the Commission's work. In particular, special thanks and appreciation to Martin J. Gruenberg, of the Senate Banking Committee, whose expert advice and counsel were instrumental to the Commission's work; Faryar Shirzad, Tim Keeler, and Deborah Lamb of the Senate Finance Committee; and Angela Ellard and Tim Reif of the House Ways and Means Subcommittee on Trade for assisting the Commission.

The Commission also wishes to thank Dick Nanto and William Whittaker of the Congressional Research Service for their research contributions on trade and labor issues; Jack Maskell of the American Law Division, and attorneys Polly Craighill, Morgan Frankel, Deputy Senate Legal Counsel, and Patricia Mack Bryan, Senate Legal Counsel, for providing legal advice and counsel to the Commission.

And, finally, the Commission would like to thank the Commission's support staff for assisting the Commissioners and staff throughout the work of the Commission. A special thanks and deep appreciation goes to Kathy Michels, whose dedication and untiring efforts in assisting the Commissioners during their work and deliberations from the inception of the Commission through the issuance of the final Report were very much appreciated by all the Commission members.
